COLORADO FIGHT MAY BOB UP ONCE MORE

Texans Fear Irrigation Congress Fight on Dam Will Be Made.

Before many weeks El Paso's attention will be called to the national irrigation congress, which will be held this year from September 30 to October 2 at Salt Lake City, Utah. Of more than usual interest to west Texas will be the meeting of irrigationists, since progress on the Elephant Butte dam, calculated to replenish the Rio Grande valley, will without doubt be one of the most important subjects to come before the convention.

It has been an open secret for some time that Colorado will attempt some move which would be unwelcome to New Mexico, Arizona and west Texas in this matter. It is natural that the more northern state opposes the erection of the huge government dam since it will reclaim the waters for the Rio Grande which were taken years ago by Colorado ditches. So it is deemed important by those interested in the southwest that this section be strongly represented at the congress to fight for its rights.

A letter from Arthur Hooker, secretary of the congress, has been received by C. A. Kinne, secretary of the El Paso chamber of commerce. Mr. Hooker wants to know the good word from Texas, which, he says, has always sent a strong delegation. He says that the support appears strong for the attendance at Salt Lake.

SAYS AUDITING REPORT WILL BE PUBLISHED BEFORE PRIMARY.
The audit need have no fear about the city officials publishing the auditor's report before July 27, the day of the primaries, according to mayor C. E. Kelly. "I have never been worried about the report," asserted the mayor Monday morning. It will be published before July 27.

"It is a difficult matter to tell just when the report will be ready, but I can say that it will be published before the primaries. As soon as the auditing committee hands in the report it will be gone over by a committee, following which it will be published."

Dear Sir:—In answer to your inquiry of this date I have to state that the meeting of the bar was called by several members thereof, as expressed in the call, to decide whether the bar would endorse one of the candidates for chief justice of the court of civil appeals, and if so, which one it would endorse. The bar meeting decided by a vote of 48 to 28, as shown by the record, that it would not make an endorsement as an association. No motion to endorse any particular candidate was made or voted on. A motion to decline to take action on the matter was the only motion voted on. It was the sense of the meeting that each individual member of the bar should be left free to support either of the candidates unaffected by an association endorsement, both being members of the local bar. Respectfully,
Walter H. Scott.

BEER, BARBECUE AND BUMBOOMB FOR THE "YOUNG DEMOCRATS"

The Ring Meeting Saturday Night Disposes of All Anti Charges—Translated by One Domingo Montoya.

Baltimore is not the only city that can pull a political meeting of the first water. Never behind in anything, El Paso can and did make political history Saturday night the same time that Champ Clark was speeding from Washington with orders to put him off at Baltimore.

Down behind Broadway and in the immediate rear of the Stanton bar, part of the local Democracy, the so-called "so-called ring," as they frequently referred to themselves, held a meeting. It was some meeting in spite of the endeavor which was furnished chiefly by the umbrella trees of an abandoned beer garden and the odors from the unsanitary alley which runs in the rear of Broadway.

"The Young Democrats." It was "The Young Democrats" meeting as per announcement, although there were a number of the older Democrats there alongside of the beer barrel and barbecue. A rough board beer table was improvised into a speaker's platform, where the Mexican voters were told of the wonders of ring rule and the awful things the antis would do if they were elected. The old days in political history hereabouts never put over any better sample of the ring rule work than the "Young Democrats" Saturday night. Several barrels of beer, a long table loaded with barbecued meat and just half enough dispensers furnished the stage for justice of the peace. The beer and barbecue were in the immediate rear of an open plumbing toilet, but this did not hinder the proceedings any more than the odor from the Broadway alley.

The Preliminary Bout.
A long haired Mexican started the fireworks, by clattering in Spanish about what the city has done for the Mexicans. This was the preliminary bout, the curtain raiser for the big spectacle which was James Murphy, candidate for justice of the peace. The crowd of Mexicans and ring leaders did the beer and sandwiches.

Domingo Montoya, who has been sitting on the edge of the speaker's platform in an attitude of waiting, referred to the Delaware or Napoleon reviewing the old guard, translated for Murphy and was forced much against his will, of course, to give a reference to himself as "Domingo Montoya, who is a candidate for constable."

The Principal Speech.
"Friends," shouted Murphy.
"Amigos," translated Domingo in booming bass.
"Domingo Montoya is all right."

Murphy.
"Domingo Montoya es bueno."—Montoya, translator.
And the game of gab was on in two languages and an equal number of speakers.
Murphy praised Montoya for everything but fixing the county court house clock. Incidentally, he boasted his own candidacy by knocking Charles Owen, his opponent, who Montoya referred to as "Charles Owen" in his translations. Murphy predicted that the second ward would go dry if Owen was elected justice of the peace, which was quite a tribute to Owen's power for good. The old Prohibitionist was dragged out and dusted off for the benefit of the Mexicans who had come to eat and drink and had stopped to listen.

Graft Charges Mashed Flat.
Murphy put an everlasting firecracker on the tail of the grafter charges by saying that if the ring had wished to graft, the "friends" of those same Mexicans would have been placed in jail instead of being turned loose. Just how the grafting process could be carried on by such a method, Murphy failed to elucidate—probably didn't think his audience would understand anyhow.

PRESIDENT ORDERS SOLDIER DEFENDED

Border Patrols Are to Be Changed Tuesday on River Front.

President Taft has ordered the department of justice to defend Marvin E. Hay, a soldier of company C, 22d infantry, who was placed under arrest upon complaint of Charles Kinkel after having shot at Kinkel's auto tire near the smelter viaduct while the soldier was on guard there. The order from the president instructed the department of justice to fight the case against the soldier to the highest court and to provide attorneys for his defense.

Border patrols will change stations Tuesday. The battalion of the 18th infantry and the first battalion of the 22d infantry will relieve the second and third battalions of the 22d at the river front and these battalions will return to Fort Bliss. The change is made once each month in order to give the soldiers a change from the camp life along the river.

Lieut. F. R. Terrell, of the 22d infantry, will leave Wednesday for California on a four months' leave of absence.
